ELECTRIC UNDERFLOOR HEATING

Uncoupling / Decoupling Membrane for Electric Underfloor Heating

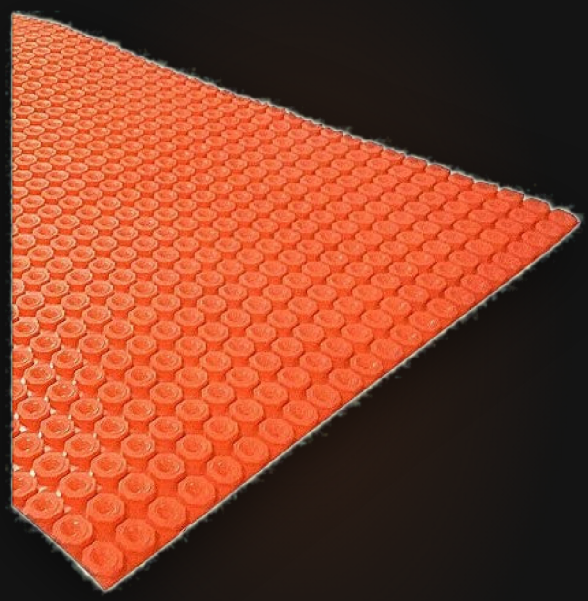

Tile protection over electric heating.

An uncoupling membrane for tiled floors over electric underfloor heating. It separates the tiles from movement in timber, new screed or mixed subfloors, helping stop cracked tiles and grout, and spreads the load over the heating cable.

PRODUCT

01 · IN THE BOX

What you get

- 1 roll of membrane

02 · YOU WILL NEED

Tools and materials

- Tape measure
- Sharp knife
- Notched trowel
- Flexible tile adhesive

03 · SAFETY

Before you start

- Take care with the knife, especially near heating cable that is already laid.
- Use flexible tile adhesive throughout and follow the adhesive maker's instructions.
- Protect any heating cable from tools and foot traffic until it is tiled over.

04 · INSTALLATION

Fit it in 6 steps.

1. Measure the floor area to be tiled and pick a roll that covers it, with a little extra for cuts.
2. Check the subfloor is solid and clean. Prime it if your adhesive needs it.
3. Cut the membrane to length with a sharp knife.
4. Spread flexible tile adhesive and bed the fleece side into it, pressing it down for full contact.
5. Lay the electric heating as its own instructions say. Loose cable presses between the membrane studs.
6. Tile on top with flexible tile adhesive.

05 · TESTING AND COMMISSIONING

Test, check, then hand over

- [x] Check the membrane is flat and fully bedded before laying the heating.

06 · ROLL SIZES

ROLL	COVERAGE
1m x 5m	5m²
1m x 10m	10m²
1m x 15m	15m²

07 · GOOD TO KNOW

How much do I need?

Each metre of roll covers 1m². Measure the floor area to be tiled and choose the roll that covers it, allowing a little extra for cuts.

08 · QUESTIONS

Asked by installers

Do I need it with an electric heating mat?

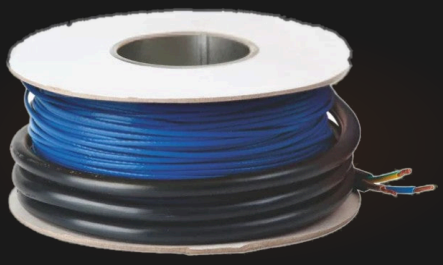

No. Mats come on their own mesh and go straight into the tile adhesive bed. The membrane is for loose cable.

Which adhesive should I use?

Flexible tile adhesive, both to bed the membrane and to fix the tiles on top.
